Making Peace With Panic: A Mindful Approach to Understanding and Treating Panic

Over 28% of adults will have a panic attack in their lifetime. Many will experience repeated attacks, which can lead to struggles to hold down a job, maintain friendships, or even carry out basic chores, like shopping for groceries. When we think of panic, we often think of panic disorder. However, individuals with PTSD, depression, social anxiety, substance use disorder, generalized anxiety, and specific phobias frequently grapple with both episodic and chronic panic attacks.

This training will delve into the problems of panic: What is it and why is it so important to treat? Then we’ll explore anxiety sensitivity theory, a compelling explanation for why some people develop panic attacks. Next, using the ironic process theory (Wegner, 1997), we’ll learn how attempts to suppress panic symptoms actually cause the very thing panic sufferers are desperately trying to avoid. We will then turn to understanding how mindfulness can break panic’s vicious cycle. After we study the fundamental elements of mindfulness and their connection to panic, we will delve into helping patients use mindfulness to ameliorate panic and start living life again.

Outline

1. What is a panic attack?
2. Explain what anxiety sensitivity is and how it explains why some people have panic attacks
3. Describe what Ironic Process is and how it can explain panic
4. Explain how to use mindfulness to help clients cope with panic attacks
5. Explain how to treat panic
6. How to treat panic
7. Diaphragmatic breathing done mindfully
8. Challenges for panic survivors learning meditation
9. Enhancing exposure therapy
10. Using mindfulness during exposure

Therapists
Psychologists
Social Workers
Counselors
Nurses

Course level: Intermediate

Learning Objectives
At the end of this seminar, participants will be able to:

1. Describe what a panic attack is and why panic is important to treat
2. Explain what anxiety sensitivity is and how it explains why some people have panic attacks
3. Describe what Ironic Process is and how it can explain panic
4. Explain the three main components of mindfulness
5. Explain how to use mindfulness to help clients cope with panic attacks

Seminar Schedule

Typically begins at 10:00 AM and ends at 1:15 PM Eastern time. There is one 15 minute break. However, check the webinar schedule.

Outline

1. Is panic that much of a problem?
2. What is a panic attack?
3. DSM-5 definition and symptom list of a panic attack and panic disorder
4. Having panic attacks without panic disorder
5. Medical conditions that look like panic
6. Anxiety sensitivity
7. A theory of how anxiety sensitivity leads to panic
8. Evidence for anxiety sensitivity as a predictor of panic
9. Ironic Process
10. How ironic process relates to panic
11. Evidence that ironic process contributes to panic
12. The three components of mindfulness: paying attention, nonjudgment, nonstriving
13. Paying attention
14. Nonjudgment
15. Nonstriving
16. How to treat panic
17. Depression
18. Treatment for panic survivors learning meditation
19. Nonjudgment
20. Building a hierarchy
21. Using mindfulness during exposure

Our seminars are available in two formats: The first is a live, interactive webinar. If the webinar time is not convenient for you, you can purchase the Home Study version. It is a recorded version of the webinar. You will have to pass a test to earn CE’s for both the live webinar and the Home Study version.

Continuing Education Credit

tzkseminars is accredited as a provider of continuing nursing education by the American Nurses Credentialing Center’s Commission on Accreditation.

Target Audience:

Psychologists
Therapists

Social Workers
Counselors
Nurses

Course level: Intermediate

General Information

The TZKseminars educational planning committee members and this seminar’s presenter have no relationship with a commercial interest pertinent to the content of this seminar.

Individuals with a disability or special need can go to tzkseminars.com to the Contact page to request accommodations.

This seminar has been reviewed and approved by Keith Hannan, Ph.D., Phil Rich, LCSW, and Loreen Yearick, MSN, RN: This approval expires on March 1, 2022.

To cancel a registration, go to the Contact page. You will be charged $30 for any cancelled registration.

If you would like to file a grievance, go to tzkseminars.com and read our Grievance Policy. Then, you can file a grievance on our Contact page.

The Presenter

Jason Drwal, Ph.D. is a licensed psychologist and a staff member of the Iowa City VA Hospital. He has helped hundreds of patients who suffer from panic disorder and PTSD using mindfulness. He is a member of the hospital’s APA accredited internship program and he offers numerous trainings on everything from evidence-based therapies for PTSD to smoking cessation. Outside of his role as a therapist, he is a freelancer who has written for local and national publications on mental health issues and he runs the therapist blog www.privatepracticecentral.com.

TZKseminars
6030 Daybreak Circle, Suite A150/355
Clarksdale, Md. 21029