Making Sense of the Complexities of Trauma

In this seminar, Dr. Hartman-Hall provides an in-depth look at the etiology of PTSD and complex trauma symptoms as well as guidelines for thorough assessment and treatment planning. Practical strategies are presented for managing clinical challenges including self-injury, treating trauma in various settings, and managing dissociation. Avoiding clinician burn-out is also a focus. This seminar provides tools developed from clinical experience and the research literature that you can start using right away to help your clients who are struggling with trauma symptoms. Includes DSM-5 changes to diagnosis of trauma disorders.

Learning Objectives

At the end of this seminar, participants will be able to:
1. Identify diagnostic challenges in working with clients who have experienced trauma.
2. Explain how current symptoms may reflect adaptations to traumatic experiences.
3. Describe important features of a complex trauma syndrome.
4. Identify several strategies for helping clients manage self-injurious and suicidal behaviors.
5. Describe vicarious traumatization and the importance of clinician self-care.

You will have to pass a test to earn CE’s for both the live webinar and the Home Study version.

The Presenter

Dr. Heather Hartman-Hall, a licensed psychologist, earned her Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology from American University in 2000. She has provided crisis counseling, individual/group psychotherapy, consultation and assessment for adolescents and adults in a variety of settings including a state psychiatric hospital, a juvenile facility, elder care facilities, primary care, and private practice. For more than a decade, she conducted individual and group psychotherapy with psychiatric inpatients presenting with difficulties including severe mental illness, substance abuse, cognitive impairment, significant trauma histories, dissociative symptoms, and self-harming behaviors. She has provided training, supervision, consultation, and program development on topics including assessment, self-injury, psychological trauma, and working with older adults. She has extensive experience in psychological assessment, including assessment for cognitive impairment and the effects of psychological trauma. Dr. Hartman-Hall has served as the Director of Training, a clinical supervisor, and a regular seminar presenter for an APA-accredited clinical psychology pre-doctoral internship. She currently provides assessment, intervention, and consultation in a primary care setting and is a faculty member of an internal medicine residency program.
